Raymond,

As always you have done an excellent job. I noted a few very minor errors that I wanted to call to your attention.

On page three, lines 2 and 3 in the last bullet point read "(by products of lipid peroxidation". You are missing a close parenthesis, which I think should come after "peroxidation".

On page 4, line 3 in the first bullet point under "Smoking, Coronary Heart Disease, and Sudden Death: Epidemiologic Evidence", you undoubtedly meant "mean age 41 years".

On page 6 in the last, long bullet point, there is a close parenthesis missing after "Linnet and Cartwright, 1996" in line 6, and in line line 10, the word should be "strengthened".

I'd like to return to the section on "Epidemiologic Evidence" on page 4. I am quite familiar with the study that the USSG cited (Dunn et al., 1999). I did want to point out that although there is clearly an increase in relative risk for younger (<50) women, the result of 74.6 is not at all reasonable and has never been confirmed by any other study. I realize that you are citing the report. I just wanted you to know.

Lastly, you have identified many, many gaps. As I have pointed out to Richard, we can't work on all of them.

Once again - great job.

All the best.

Ted

The attached MS Word document contains my review of the US SG Report. The majority of my attention was focused on CVD but I have also included a few comments on acute myeloid leukemia and other

Dee Shannonhouse: could you please acknowledge receipt of my review.
